COLLEAGUES AT TOP HOME INDUSTRY SYMPOSIUM

(Bethel, CT) - Dick Woodford, president of Scalzo Construction Group recently joined more than 400 other custom home builders to discuss innovative ideas in customer service, project management, universal design and other leading edge practices as part of the annual National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) Custom Builder Symposium. "I attend the Custom Builder Symposium every year to re-charge my batteries, network with other builders and learn new ways to improve upon what we do and how we do it," said Woodford.

The symposium is an educational and networking opportunity designed exclusively for custom builders by custom builders and includes practical courses in technology, design, marketing and production. Further, builders participated in NAHB University of Housing Certified Graduate Builder and Remodelor courses and in candid roundtable discussions of key residential construction industry issues.
